Man dies after ambulance leap

A man died in hospital after he was struck by a car as he jumped from the back of an ambulance on to a busy dual carriageway.

The patient, who is believed to be in his early 30s, was being transported to Derby City Hospital when he tried to leave the ambulance, and paramedics were forced to stop.

The man then leapt on to the carriageway of the A38 in Derbyshire and ran into the path of an oncoming car, police said.

The man, who was from the Swadlincote area, was taken to Derbyshire Royal Infirmary where he died early on Saturday.

The incident happened at about 11.45pm on Friday on the northbound carriageway, about half a mile north of the A50 near Derby.

The incident comes just over a month after a teenage girl fell from the back of an ambulance on the M5 motorway in Gloucestershire.

Natalie Kathryn Dibden, 16, of Orchard Close, Charfield, Gloucestershire, died when she fell from the vehicle near junction 12 of the northbound carriageway in the early hours of November 9.

She died in Gloucestershire Royal Hospital.

She had spent the evening with friends at the Warehouse nightclub in Dursley and it is understood she suddenly became confused. She reportedly opened the ambulance doors in this state.
